“ Charles (Chip)....I am so sorry for your loss. Your Mother had the biggest smile I have even seen, and I am so sad to think that she has passed without saying "Goodbye and God Bless".

All my love,
Carol.

“ I would like to share another memory or two. In the late 70's we heard a motivational speaker Ruth Matheson speak in Hamilton, and were so uplifted and empowered by this woman's message that we went to her next seminar and signed up for the 6 month program, "Success Motivation Institute" out of Waco Texas. $1200 at that time was a lot of money but we chose to invest in ourselves and they took Visa. Our friend Liz joined us too. It was about achieving life balance and weekly goal setting and evaluation. Wow what a time of great discovery and fun together! Anne also did a pretty good imitation of me over the years and I can still hear her laughter today. May you rest in peace and shine on my friend. Pat Carter

“ Anne and I shared so many wonderful life experiences together. I remember calling and saying Anne this is so important I have to call you first just to really know what I'm thinking. You were so proud of your son and I admired your ability to do and handle all that you did with a smile along the way. Thank you for being a friend. My sincere condolences Chip. Patricia Carter

“ Our relationship with Anne goes back many years and although we have not stayed in touch we will always remember her warmth, contagious laugh and beautiful smile. One always felt safe in the company of Anne.
A lovely, kind spirit has left this world.

“ It was in the early 1970s when Anne applied at McMaster University for an administrative position in the Department of Civil Engineering and Engineering Mechanics (as it was called then). I remember reading the report on her first interview and was impressed with the observation of the interviewer "...smiles a lot". This was confirmed frequently when we later met both at Mac and in our home where she visited often along with her son Chip. He was close to the same age as our youngest Crawford. The five of them seemed to get along well, a friendship that I'm happy to say lasts to this day.

Thanks to several years spent in Scotland Anne had no problem with our Scottish accent. Anne and Rea quickly became firm friends, helping us to understand and cope with many Canadian customs and expressions.

The last few years have been increasingly sad ones as Anne's health steadily deteriorated. She will be sadly missed by all the Smiths.

“ It is both amazing and profound, the effect a relative stranger can have on your life. At first, walking in and out of your life every six weeks or so, sharing the smallest of moments of their life with you. That was the kind of relationship Anne and I had. I learned about her time when she was younger to explore life and travel. About her times in Florida and around the world. I learned of romance and grief. I heard the stories of struggle. I had the opportunity to share my stories and struggles with her as well. In return, I received words of encouragement. I believe we become part of the people we meet and they become part of us in turn. I am glad to have been a part of Anne's life and she will always be a part of mine. -from her hairdresser.

“ Such sad news , I have lovely memories of Anne when I was growing up , Anne would visit our home and I loved the way she included me in the adult chatter , making me feel grown up with her and my mum . I especially loved the way she joined in with me to cajole my mum into buying whatever new sweater or shoes I was hankering after at the time. Thanks Anne ,it was a privilege to know you and your love and laughter always made the home feel like there was a celebration going on even though it wasn't anyone's birthday . Love always Pauline and family xxx
